The Prorogation of Parliament.

The Hawaiian Kingdom is a very infant of States in years and growth, yet it is a political child of great and interesting promise. It is best situated and conditioned to test the problem, interesting to philosophic humanitarians of a tropical civilization, and give to it specessful issue. Such friends of human progress,-and especially those hopeful of Polynesian progress, like the late King Leopold of Belginm, one of the neurishing fathers of this young Constitutional Statewould have had the heart warmed to have witnessed our little pageant on Wednesday last; to have listened to the peal of guns, and all the fanfare of a martial cavalcade; to have looked upon the array of distinguished and will be proceeded against according to Representatives of the most powerful States law.
